The singer/woman active designer/dominator worldwide is just one of many musical artists to have their music turned into grindhouse movie posters. MusiXploitation is a series of posters for movies that only exist in the hearts of rabid fans. In the late 1990s, Master P would release narrative films with the same titles as his albums, which were a kind of fictional precursor to Lemonade with some seriously troubled dialogues. This new series is a glimpse of the world where this practice caught up with the entire music industry. Created by Paris-based art director David Redon, the series features blaxploitation-style posters for songs and albums by Amy Winehouse, 2Pac and Jay-Z. (Previously, Redon had crumpled musicians with vintage ads.) Some are thematically appropriate, such as Frank Ocean's galactic, the frightening Pyramids, and others would no doubt leave their as upset as Laurn Hill's miseducation turned into a bikini bank robbery. As Quentin Tarantino's recent book covers featured in Co.Create, some of the entries are marked by almost comically poor photoshop. Those who who the brand, however, as Tyler, the creator of horror-core Yonkers, hit hard. See more posters on the slides above. (via Fubiz) Skip the navigation! The Lovebirds is a gift that Fans of Insecure and Silicon Valley and action comedy lovers will surely love. It was supposed to be released in theaters, but luckily Netflix caught the Lovebirds without theater. The latest launch of the streaming platform brings together Issa Rae and Kumail Nanjani as an on-screen couple (which you never knew you needed until now) and adds a funny touch and a killer soundtrack. Jibran and Leilani, who have been dating for four years, are going to a friend's house for dinner before accidentally hitting a cyclist with his car. The couple's next 24 hours are full of murders, fights and a very intimidating horse. You will question your hilariously horrible decisions and root for your relationship during your crazy journey. The Lovebirds soundtrack has many romantic jams and pump anthems to accompany this normal couple (and the audience) on their perilous adventure. A standout track is Katy Perry's Firework, which is so captivating that it requires a song by Jibran and Leilani in the midst of all the chaos. (Seriously, who can resist singing this song whenever it appears?) This soundtrack is as unexpected as the plot of The Lovebirds. If it has four or five strings, is fingered or finger chosen, the banjo is as melodic as it is percussive. Often, banjo pickers are not in front of the band – they are around to support what the guitar or violinist is doing, only occasionally given their own space to shine with a long solo. That said, though, there are many great instrumental banjo songs from the entire history of folk music - traditional jams and contemporary arrangements. Learn more about banjo with these five essential banjo songs. Jack Vartoogian/Getty Images/Getty Images This classic double banjo song has become famous for the movie Deliverance and as such is enough to send any horror movie fan to a scary stucco when it comes. But, the song was written in 1955 by Arthur Guitar Boogie Smith and was originally titled Feudin' Banjos. He placed a four-string banjo against a five-stringer, and Smith recorded the original with Don Reno. But it was this version of Eric Weissberg and Steve Mandell that made the song a verifiable success in 1973 thanks to the film. Of course, as it turned out, the film used the song without Smith's permission. But, that's still the way most people know this essential banjo v. banjo showdown. Michael Ochs Archives/Getty Images This classic bluegrass was written by the late and great Earl Scruggs and first recorded by him and Lester Flatt with the Foggy Boys in 1949. Much like the Banjos, the Foggy Mountain Breakdown has gained much of its success from being included in a major film. In this case, it was used as background music for the film Bonnie and Clyde (although it has been used in other films ever since). Scruggs sang this song in Washington DC in 1969 during a Vietnam War protest and eventually won a Grammy for the composition after recording it with Steve Martin. Redfens/Getty Images This ancient folk classic can run on any number of instruments, of course, but it's easily a standard for banjo bluegrass pickers and old and young violinists. The song is so popular, it now comes with its own line dance (with the same name). The dance enjoyed its own popularity, gaining time in the film Urban Cowboy, which aroused a renewed interest in the old folk song. Historically, Cotton-Eyed Joe dates back to the 19th century in the United States. It was performed instrumentally and with various variations in lyric verses and was recorded by all kinds of artists, including Burl Ives, the Chieftains with Ricky Skaggs, and the Western swing band Asleep at the Wheel. Waring Abbott/Getty Images Just like Cotton-Eyed Joe, Cripple Creek is usually played on violin or banjo (or, with larger bands, is shared by both instruments). Its origins are unknown and no one can even agree whether it's about a location in Virginia or one with the same name in Colorado. Regardless, it has been a staple of folk and country musicians and recordings of the song dating back to the 1920s. This version was recorded by Earl Scruggs with Lester Flatt. WireImage/Getty Images When it comes to contemporary banjo pickers, few can overcome tony trischka's dexterity. Trischka has been involved in several different styles over the years, composing all kinds of songs for the banjo. But this song from their 2007 group effort album Double Banjo Bluegrass Spectacular is certainly one of the most memorable songs. He recorded it for that album with Scott Vestal. Image: Walt Disney Animation Studios; Walt Disney Pictures One of the many reasons people love Disney is for its catchy songs that often have a message, and so far, we all know that Disney outperforms any and all other companies when it comes to the songs in their movies. These songs are usually at the top of the stops, and both adults and children find themselves singing the catchy songs. They rely on the help of award-winning producers, writers and celebrities to create songs that people will hear years after the film's release. Many of his songs received critical acclaim, and many won awards at both the Golden Globes and the Oscars. Some of these hits include How Far I'll Go, Let It Go, A Whole New World, Colors of the Wind, Reflections, Circle of Life and Part of Your World.
